Your legacy to King Edward VII's Hospital

As a charity, we rely on donations to help us purchase expensive equipment, and to ensure our work with Veterans is funded.

Since we began in 1899, the legacies we have received- large and small- have enabled us to continue our unique work. People give to us because they genuinely love the way we look after our patients. We put people before profit and have a culture of kindness, going the extra mile for our patients.

For others, their relatives or friends have been treated here and they want to say thank you to this Hospital.

Your legacy will ensure we can continue to flourish into the future.

We need to raise £2 million a year from voluntary donations.

People are very generous, but we are a small organisation and we really do need all the money we can to ensure we remain as London's foremost independent hospital.

We also give means-tested grants to anyone who has served in the Armed Forces, their wives, widows and spouses. It's our way of giving back and recognises the illustrious history which began when Sister Agnes opened her home to injured veterans of the Second Boer war.

When considering your legacy, of course, it's really important that you ensure your loved ones are looked after first, but please also remember us in your Will.

We would be pleased to give you or your solicitors the right wording and bank details. We will also recognise your donation by inclusion in our legacy book of remembrance.

If you ask for more information or indicate you will be pledging a gift to us in your Will, then we want to keep in touch with you. To do so, we need to retain your name, address and other information.

If you are not happy for us to hold your data, please let us know. We only use your information to tell you about developments at the Hospital and send you our bi-annual Friends newsletter. We never exchange your data with other organisations.

To find out more, or to tell us that you have made a legacy pledge to the Hospital please contact the fundraising team on:
